Inflatable water park cleaning

PhotoAlto/Laurence Mouton/Getty ImagesEven Though the water is much more abundant (and cheaper) than any cleaning product you can buy in store, it shouldn't always be your go-to when you need to scrub every level in your home. Sometimes it does more damage than good and you need to use cleaning products meant for special finish or surfaces. Read on to find out what you should never clean with water. Also learn about things you should never clean with vinegar. Pattadis Walarput/Getty ImagesYou should never use water to clean velvet or other fuzzy fabrics such as suede or microfiber. When the fibers are soaked on these fabrics and then dried, they can get stuck in their new position, says Laura Smith, owner of All Star Cleaning Services. Smith recommends hiring a professional cleaner for fuzzy fabrics. They clean it but also use a special brush to make sure the material looks as good as new. Don't miss these secrets, your dry cleaner won't tell you. Rouzes/Getty ImagesEven Though there is a water-resistant finish on hardwood and laminated floors, it wears off over time, and cleaning them with water can cause damage. If water enters the wood, it can cause it to swell and black. The perfect way to clean a wood or laminated floor is to use a flat microfiber mop and spray cleaning solution with a little spray bottle at a time, smith says, adding that most flooring manufacturers make specific recommendations on which product they have in their flooring. These are 11 things that you should never clean with baking soda. FelixR/Getty ImagesMusical tools can be tricky to clean because they are made of many different materials. But similar to how wood floors can be damaged if cleaned with water, wooden tools can also. Tyler Harris, who runs a luxury residential cleaning company based in New Jersey, says cleaning your wooden tools with water can change the color of areas of discoloring and splitting and cracking in the wood. Harris says you just need to use cleaners made for musical instruments. Now, here's the best way to clean your wooden floors. Westend61/Getty ImagesThis should now be known, but electricity and water are not mixed. In most cases, you just have to dry dust electronics, Smith says, if you have to clean something that doesn't come with a dry cloth, your cleaning cloth is just a little wet with a light duty cleaning product and then cleaning electronics. If cleaning them with a wet cloth makes you nervous, there are wipes and cleaning spray designed specifically for electronics. Here are more instructions on how to properly clean all your digital screens. hanohiki/ Getty ImagesIf You You don't get to its tarnished silver with water, it just creates more stains. The best thing you can do is use silver polish, says Kathy Turley, marketing manager at Clean Heroes House. If you don't have silver polish around, Turley recommends using a ketchup. The mild acidity of the ketchup will help to get rid of the blemish, he says, letting his silver soak in the ketchup for 5-10 minutes, rinsing off the ketchup with water, and buffing with a cloth. Why is it safe to use water later in the stage? Because you're washing the ketchup off and now get rid of the blemish, explains Turley. Here are some other surprising ways you can use to clean silver. Elena Roy/Getty ImagesThis may seem like an obvious item that you shouldn't clean with water, but a surprising number of people think it's ok to store your contact lenses in the water overnight. Suitable contact lens cleaning solutions all have antimicrobial substances that discourage bacterial growth. A contact lens stored in water may have a small amount of bacteria on its surface after a day of use, says Optometrist Jonathan Wolfe in Ardsley Eye Care. Water only encourages this bacterium to multiply, and when the patient re-inserts the lens the next day, that colony of bacteria is given the opportunity to move over the cornea, causing olseration. Also, sterile tap water is not like a contact solution and it can contain bacteria, fungi, or parasites that make your way onto your contact lens if you let them soak in water. Alongside the audience, learn what else you need to clean up every day. EricVega/Getty Images This may be no brainer, but using a wet cloth to clean the outlet cover or light fixtures can lead to the risk of electrocution or fire, says Nasutsa Mabwa, head of ServiceMaster Restoration by Simons. Instead, use dry dust or dry fabric to clean the outlet coating and light fixtures, or separate the light fixture before trying to clean it. See which cases are a fire hazard if you don't clean them enough. noppadon_sangpeam/Getty ImagesSimilar to bricks, marble is also a porous material that can be damaged by water. If you use water to clean marble it can remove protective sealant on it, potentially damaging any grout of caulking, says Harris. Just like bricks, we have a brush and soft cloth to clean it. Make sure you also know about these things that you should never clean with the magic cleaner. Monica Monty/EyeEm/Getty Images Is not a problem in her gas range with clean water. The ignitions on your gas range are very sensitive to water. Sometimes, the issue will correct itself when the ignition dries out, but cleaning your gas range burners with water can also permanently damage them. As a result, never spray a cleaning product directly into your gas range burner. Spray cleaning fabric then clean Don't miss the level of ways you're shortening your stove life and how to prevent them. Hikesterson/Getty ImagesSimilar to stick floors, water can also ruin your wood furniture. Just think about what happens when you go a glass on your wooden table without a coaster. The best course of action is to dust your wood tables and furniture regularly (we recommend a microfiber cloth) and you can use wood polish or lemon oil to protect it, Turley says, if your wood furniture is already damaged, try these tricks to remove water stains from the wood. Ben Bryant/Getty ImagesUsing removed water for cleaning brass fixtures and lacquer tools and resulted in more blemish and caused permanent damage. Harris says to avoid DIY cleaning solutions and wood to clean with quality rice polish. For cleaning, Harris Wyman recommends Polish Bras. It remains shining on brass that lasts a long time. The only downside is that it leaves a easily removable white layer in brassy corners, Harris says. Now that you know what you shouldn't clean with water, make sure you never mix these cleaning products together. Neil Armstrong and Buzz Aldrin walked on the moon and over in Tempe, Arizona a man named Phil Dextra unleashed another wonder of modern science: America's first wave pool. For 50 years, Dukster's invention changed the landscape of the amusement park, allowing legions of children in drought-distressed cities to ride the bonafide waves. If it feels like almost as long as you set foot in a water park, now is the time to treat that. Can you even remember the smell of Claire, the feeling of plastic reception wristbands, the magnificent sound of pool wave bells sending hundreds of swimmers into a festive frenzy? Of course, many things have changed since the doctor's days. Food has got better, accommodation is increasingly luxurious, and rides are more extreme. In fact, many parks have grown up with us, as new rides open with more, dare we say, sophisticated audiences in mind. To guide you into the world of water recreation, we've rounded up the top eight water parks across the country for adult-sized fun. So get your cooler, take him to a wave pool, and ask yourself, hey, what are all these kids doing here? SoundWaves | Gaylord Opryland Resort & Convention CenterSoundWavesNashville, TennesseeThis upscale and modern oasis goes beyond crappy concession stand food. Water parks are never known for their cuisine. Soft pretzels, soggy pizzas, plastic trays of tortilla chips are filled with a pool of nacho cheese sauce (lukewarm, if you're lucky) - this bite is usually filled for periods in amusement parks. That's what makes SoundWaves - Nashville's brand new, four-acre indoor/outdoor water attraction inside gaylord Opryland Resort & Convention Center - A stand. Beyond the upscale, modern water park attractions (think 84-degree interior temptations throughout the year, state-of-the-art wave rides and adults only bars and cabanas) you'll find fares that connect from your more mature tastes, including lobster rolls, bowls of pokéful, slippery, and pale Mexican-style flavors in combos like strawberry mint and strawberry jalapeño. Bread is cooked on site and honey comes from the beehives of the property's premises. Grub spread across a restaurant, two food trucks, and adults only high-level lounges with their own bar and infinity pool. The craft cocktail menu has been expertly certified by the resort's manager of drink Trudy Thomas, aka Queen Bourbon and a spirits trainer. All upscale food and drinks pair well with low-expression park decor, spa-like: walls of succulents and exposed wooden beams. Plus, both indoor and outdoor water areas are equipped to host live bands - it's a music city, after all. Swap all the Euro club guys for the game's story characters and comb to the rhythmic mill for a loop around the lazy river and... No, they're so different. But Tornado Skunk does provide excitement at night for anyone who prefers to bathe under the moonlight. Back for a second year, H2O Park will host a night of brilliance over 25 select dates between May 30th and August 24th. From 8 p.m. to 11 p.m., these after-hours events include glowing wristbands, bright backgrounds, and specialized boats on the lazy river. Have fun in neon costumes and Buddy Rex Partysaurus keep the dance party going on the sandy beaches of the surf pool. There is also a designated area, Wharf, for a crowd of over 21 where you can sip cocktails with light cubes up as well as bubbles served in sparkling champagne flutes. But perhaps the best part of all is that you'll have access to water park slides minus the lines -- not to mention avoiding any tanning lines. [Get your ticket here.] Kalahari ResortsKalahari ResortsWisconsin Dells, WisconsinTake a break from slipping and sliding with some Wisconsin-made craft brews. If you've ever tried to get a beer in a special pizza joint with a Moses vasco called Chuck -- where a kid can be a kid -- you know that beer can only aspire to be Miller Litt or MGD, at best. However, Kalahari proves that family-friendly and quality brews do not have to be mutually exclusive. Located in the delightfully cheesy hearts of Wisconsin, aka the world's water park capital, Kalahari is home to a beer-focused restaurant called the Wisconsin Brewing Pub. Create your own flights and sample the state's best profits, including the shedding of New Glarus, Port Huron, and Lake Louis Brewing, then go to African slides with themed (we see you, Zipper Zimbabwe and Swahili Swirl). Over in another celebrity Dell Water Park, Noah's Ark, offers more limited beer throughout the summer, but the park hosts the final horah full of hops for its last weekend of the season. The annual Arktoberfest is a celebration of everything Wisconsin, including polka, sausages, and, yes, craft beer. [Get your ticket here.] Mandalay Bay BeachLas Vegas, the NevadaThis Strip hotel lets you strip down, with upscale digs and optional tops, adults-only area. Although Vegas lies in the Mojave Smukdab desert, there is no shortage of watering holes in the city. And while you'll find a pool just about every hotel on the strip, we're raising Mandalay Bay to water park status because of the resort's aquatic trifecta: wave pool, lazy river, and beach (handmade, of course). Spread across 11 acres, mandalay bay beach makes it possible to frolic in waves, nurse the piña colada while languorously drift in a pipe, and let loose at dj-turned pool party, Daylight Beach Club (Thursday Sunday) - all within striking distance of the full casino. Music lovers should also check out the Mandalay Bay summer concert series hosted in the pool area. Listen to Eccles Juans and Ziggy Marley while digging their feet in the sand or wadi in the water. Anyone looking for a little more privacy and a toptional experience can head to the only offshoot resort adult, the Mora Beach Club. There, guests can book an array of poolside daybeds, cabanas, and even private pavillion with their pool, waterfalls, and wetbar. [Get your ticket here.] Schlitterbahn New BraunfelsSchlitterbahn Waterpark & Resort New Braunfels, TexasStash your stuff (ahem, beer) in easily accessible bungalows. Destinations like the Maldives, the Lyselles, and Bora Bora boast overwater bungalows, but you just have to fly to Texas for over-drilling of park water. Schleiterbhaen has seven luxury Treehaus suites -- equipped with full kitchens, living rooms and hand-expanded furniture -- that ignore both the lazy river of the water park and the actual river, Komal. Here, you can literally accidentally surf out of bed and into a domestic YouTube or hang ten in Boogie Bahn. The entire eastern part of the park is within minutes of walking from the suites, which means much less schlepping in Schlitterbahn. Large suites have three bedrooms and sleep up to 12 so you and your 11 closest friends can store your flip-flops and sunscreen in the room and then pop in for snacks and juices between rides. Because if you have learned anything at your age, it is the king's comfort and without any of those little wardrobes is strictly for the kids. wood and chlorine wafts between your waterlogged nostrings? For the most real outdoor adventure Ride the 80-foot slide in Sedona's Oak Creek Valley. Instead of PVC, this umbrella is naturally carved into red rock, made slick by algae, and by a stream that empties into a large swimming hole. In addition to the slide, there's a half-mile stretch from Oak Creek that's the opening game to take the plunge. You can also pack picnics, go fishing salmon upstream beyond recreational areas of water, and hit park trails. In addition, keep your peepers peeled for javelinas - wild pig-like creatures that are native to the area (something you'll never see in handmade parks). Even the man or woman thinking sometimes desires to drop down a 65-foot speed slide (maybe?). If so, there is Elitch Gardens and its epic Mega Wedgie Ride. After they have gotten enough of their swimming trunks in one category, artistic water lovers will be willing to appreciate the summer dive in film at this Denver park. Every Friday from June 28 to August 2, the wave pool remains open after hours for a free screening of the film, including the park reception. While you don't necessarily see arthouse films, you can return Aquaman, Incredible 2, and Mary Poppins (hey, Tony Award-winning Lin-Manuel Miranda plays, so much highbrow). As a bonus, the water park's reception also includes entering the property theme park, where you can test one of the most buzzing about attractions in the country, Kaleidoscape's Meow Gregg. Meow Wolfe is a collective psyche art based outside Santa Fe, and the rides they created at Elitch Gardens are described as a mind-bending journey and an odyssey of creative discovery. [Get your ticket here.] Summer fun Water Belton Park, TexasGoing just got wetter. The funniest bar in Belton, Texas has a dress code: a required swimsuit. That's because the bar is really a fun summer, a water park about 60 miles north of Austin. From June to August, the park hosts adult nights every other Saturday. Exclusively for the 21+ crowd, the evening includes live music, a bikini dance party, and plenty of lazy river action lit through midnight. As an added bonus, BYOB nights and receptions are only $20, so you don't even have to splurge on park amusement pricing. Playing your cards right and your new go-out outfit may just include a pair of sultry blue socks.
